Exclusive: Helicopter Pilot Forced to Get COVID Vaccine Grounded After Experiencing Rare Strokes

Tim McAdams, a 59-year-old pilot and health enthusiast loved his work teaching pilots to fly Airbus Helicopters — until Airbus required him to get the COVID-19 vaccine. Three weeks after he got his second Pfizer shot, Tim had two cerebellar strokes — a rare stroke in the cerebellum that accounts for only 1-4% of total strokes.

Tim McAdams, a 59-year-old pilot, health enthusiast, husband and father was content with his job training pilots for Airbus Helicopters — a job he held for over a decade — until Airbus mandated the COVID-19 vaccine for its employees.

Up to that point, Tim and his wife Beth McAdams had approached the vaccine as a question of "risk management," they told The Defender in an interview. Because Tim was fit, healthy and had no family history of illness, they didn't think he needed to get the shot, despite repeated urging by Airbus.

"But when my employer mandated it, I thought, 'Well now all of our retirement plans, everything could be in jeopardy if I have to try to find another job,'" Tim said.

He didn't qualify for a medical exemption and had no religious beliefs that would exempt him, so they felt he had no choice.

Tim got his first Pfizer shot on Oct. 17, 2021, and the second on Nov. 7, 2021. Three weeks later he had two cerebellar strokes, a rare stroke in the cerebellum that accounts for only 1-4% of total strokes.

"I woke up in the middle of the night, dizzy, throwing up and with difficulty moving my legs. My wife took me to an urgent care facility and they diagnosed me with vertigo," Tim said.

RFK Jr./Hooker NEW book: Vax-Unvax. Order Now!

The hospital sent him home with drugs for nausea. The next night, he said, it happened again. They returned to urgent care.

Although the doctors still thought he was suffering from vertigo, they wanted to observe him overnight in the hospital. But, Tim said, "They only wanted to send me to a hospital within their hospital [system], which was a two-hour ambulance ride away," even though there were approximately 15 hospitals closer to them in the Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas, metroplex.

"Patient care was not the priority," Beth said.

Beth and Tim returned home instead. But the next morning when the symptoms returned, they went by ambulance to the nearest hospital. Doctors there told Tim he had suffered two strokes, one on each side of his brain.

"Cerebellar strokes, in themselves, are very rare to begin with," Beth said. "And then to have them bilaterally was very very strange. We were just shocked. I mean shocked is all I can remember," because Tim was such a healthy person and had never had any health issues at all.

'You'll never ever get a doctor in this facility to admit the vaccine had anything to do with it'

In the hospital, the McAdams asked the doctors repeatedly what could have caused this rare event, but "they always shrugged."

It didn't dawn on them that the vaccine could have caused the strokes until Tim's doctors began questioning them about recent events. They asked whether Tim had fallen, suffered any injuries or done anything at all they could possibly think of that was outside the norm in the previous three months.

"And I told the doctor, 'Well, the only thing is three weeks prior I got the second shot of the vaccine,'" Tim said. The doctor responded, "'No, that had nothing to do with it.' And he walked out."

"The thing that got me," Tim said, "is they were telling me they had no idea why it happened, but they were really quick to eliminate only one possible cause, the one change that had happened."

After the doctor left, a nurse who had been in the room spoke up. "For political reasons, you'll never ever get a doctor in this facility to admit that the vaccine has anything to do with it," the nurse said. "But I think it does, and I encourage you to research that and contact VAERS (Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System)."

Another nurse told Beth that she worked all over the metroplex and had seen countless vaccine injuries. The nurse told them vaccine injuries were "definitely prevalent and needed to be investigated," but the doctors were "not willing to have a conversation about it, not even willing to say, 'Well, we're not sure.'"

That nurse also encouraged them to report Tim's injury to VAERS.

After that, things took a turn for the worse. While showering in the hospital, Tim started to feel his legs shake and give out. He lurched for the door, seeking help.

Beth said, "I heard this clunk where he opened the hand lever of the bathroom door, opened it a little bit and let out the most horrific moaning scream I've ever heard."

Tim was rapidly becoming paralyzed on his left side as the nurses dragged him to his hospital bed.

"I'm looking at him. Tim can't talk, he can't even raise his hand, barely. He's trying to grab three of his fingers to tell me that he thinks it's the third stroke," Beth said.

But it wasn't another stroke. Tim was suffering from brain swelling, which they treated with drugs and Tim soon returned to normal.

But a few days later, the swelling returned. Beth was awakened in the night by a call informing her Tim was being rushed into surgery for an emergency craniotomy.

After the surgery, he remained in the acute-care hospital. "It was such a wild 80-some days in the hospital because along the way he developed double pneumonia and lung failure," Beth said.

Tim was intubated a number of times and eventually given a tracheotomy and a feeding tube. His vocal cords were damaged in the process.

Eventually, Tim began to recover.

Getting the story out to warn others

After the ordeal, Tim had to learn to do everything from scratch — to breathe on his own, walk and talk. He was in a rehab hospital for 30 days regaining those basic functions. "They got me out of the bed into a chair and into a wheelchair and a walker," Tim said.

Outpatient rehab followed. Tim was able to return to a greater degree of physical normalcy, and he continues to improve. But he still struggles with fine motor skills, loss of balance and dizziness multiple times a day.

"Fortunately, cognitively, he is 100% there, thank God," Beth said. "It's the coordination and putting things together. The thoughts are there, but he can't speak them as fast, so it's speech coordination and mobility, which is typical for this type of stroke."

Tim was able to return to work. He couldn't fly but could teach in a flight simulator. On the job, he began suffering headaches and high blood pressure and had to make the decision to stop working.

"That's very disappointing to me because it means that at least for a few years, I can't go back to work because I can't risk my health. And of course, I spent 40 years in this career and I love flying," Tim said.

This was difficult to come to terms with, Tim said. He was anxious at first to get recertified to fly. But his doctor pointed out that "in my business, I don't have the luxury of having a second pilot — it's what we call 'single pilot.'"

The doctor told Tim, "If this had happened when you were flying, you would be dead. And so would everybody that was with you."

"So with that thought in mind," Tim said, "I'm thinking, well, maybe I'm better off not flying. I don't want to put myself or anyone else in jeopardy."

"At this point, Tim wouldn't be physically able to fly anyway," Beth said. "Life is different today in many ways."

Tim is on disability, which has hurt their finances. They downsized, sold their home and moved out to the country where things are less expensive.

From a day-to-day perspective, Beth said, "It's handlebars in the shower for balance. I always have an eye and an ear on him. He's still a fall risk because of the balance and the coordination. So I don't like to leave him alone. He's not able to work out in a gym."

But, she said they continue to stay active. "I firmly believe that eating healthy and staying active is key."

Order Now 'The Wuhan Cover-up' by RFK Jr.!

Tim's primary care physician for more than 15 years, and who helped him recuperate and make decisions about work, blamed Tim's stroke on the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine.

Tim said the doctor himself got a blood clot in his leg after being vaccinated, lost one patient and had two patients — Tim and another person — who had strokes, all in a very small family practice in Colleyville, Texas.

As they settle into their new home and new normal, the McAdams are starting to connect to others and share their story.

"We're just now starting to try to get the story out in hopes that other people may think about the risks — especially now with the whole [Biden] administration push for more vaccines, boosters and stuff — so that people understand the risk in doing that," Tim said.

Tim also shared his story, with pictures of his journey to recovery, on his new Substack and on the US Freedom Flyers Substack.

On Monday, Tim and Beth talked with Children's Health Defense (CHD) Polly Tommey, program manager for CHD.TV. Polly is on CHD's nationwide "Vax-Unvax" bus tour gathering stories from people injured by vaccines.

"For political reasons" we were all treated like guinea pigs. "For political reasons" doctors ignored their oath to "first do no harm" refusing to treat patients with known established medical protocols. "For political reasons" they dismissed their patients reports of injury following vaccination. "For political reasons" we were all illegally confined, lost jobs, lost businesses, lost homes, lost retirement savings, lost medical plans, and lost too many family members to count. "For political reasons" all of this happened to line the pockets of the CDC, the FDA, the National institutes of health, and whatever other organizations you want to add.....including Pfizer, Moderna, Fauci, Bill and Melinda Gates, the majority of healthcare providers nationwide, the current administration, the majority of Democrat governors in the country, and however many other names you want to add to the list of criminals who perpetrated this scamdemic on the world's population. "For political reasons" we had all better take heed, know that they are already preparing to launch another scamdemic on us mid-September and gather enough strength and courage to stand up and refuse to fall in line like lemmings.....this only ends when we declare together we have had enough and will not stop until everyone involved is held accountable, including those doctors and nurses who told unvaccinated patients they deserved to be left to die, they should be clubbed over the head like baby seals, they didn't deserve to breathe the same air as the rest of the population. Jabbed or unjabbed we are all members of the human race, and when trained medical professionals forget that and believe they have the right to choose who lives or dies, they need to be held to answer for their criminal actions. Stop falling for their scare tactic of the day, week or month that is all designed to distract you from seeing what is really going on . Wake up and use the brain the good Lord gave you.

No amnesty! I hope this oncoming travesty will shake the people enough to rise up and demand personal autonomy and freedom. After all, if the shots work, then the vaccinated have nothing to worry about.

The injections were NEVER proven to stop Covid... Whoever told us they were? I was told they were Fast Tracked and NEVER really went through the testing trails... They just got given out and went into the arms of people that thought they would prevent Covid. Was that what they did? Hummmm...

I'm seeing much more scepticism at online news comment pages whenever the 'next pandemic' is headlined. Tripledemic isn't it?! How ridiculous, and yet I know far too many people, some long-time buddies, who will head straight for the triple jab.

Seriously people need to read ALL of what you wrote and then HEED the info and get their brains in gear, b/c most are just totally asleep at the wheel. And the rest have their heads buried in the sand!!!
Are we now dumbed down? I think we might be... We are multitasking soooo much that some of us are just burning up brain cells... We don't know if we're going right or left!!!
Thank you for your GOD given wisdom...

This is truly tragic.
But one of the biggest problems seems to be that when people are told that a bad reaction only occurs 1% or 5% or 10% of the time many seem to translate that to mean that should it happen to them it will be 1%, 5% or 10% of the reported injury, overlooking the fact that should you experience the bad outcome you will have whatever it is 100%. If it is death or a stroke you will be 100% dead or 100% stroked out - not 1% of the severity of the outcome.
IT NEEDS TO BE STRSSED THAT IF SOMETHING HAPPENS 1% OF THE TIME IT MEANS THAT 1 IN 100 PATIENTS EXPERIENCE THAT OUTCOME. BUT IF YOU HAPPEN TO BE THE 1 IN 100 YOU WILL BE 100% AFFECTED - NOT 1%.

That does sound like it's total common sense. Now hopefully those are us with common sense get it, but remember that NOT ALL OF US have common sense...
We can't all see the forest for the trees. Some people unfortunately are (truthfully) just not very bright, others are just stupid, and we can't fix stupid. Some people listen to their doctors who had recommended they take the vaccines and I think there was an incentive for telling that to the patients from the pharmaceutical corporations, in the form of a $$$ compensation... I mentioned the vaccines today to my new family doctor and she immediately turned off the conversation, did not say goodbye or anything and left the room and closed the door. OH MY!!! It appears as Beth said (in the article I just read) that doctors have been BOUGHT and will NOT admit that covid had anything to do with it... Ahhhh...
YES, if you get it then you are 100% DEAD, or you are sick 100% or crippled up for life 100%. I know about vaccines. I got the Polio one back in the 50's and I got Polio from that vaccine. I've had it ALL of my entire life...I know what they are capable of doing to people.... I've suffered for my entire life... People need to wise up and be cautious about what they allow to go into the system...Not to mention they were "fast tracked" and never properly tested before being allowed to go into the bodies of humans...Hummm...

I am sorry to hear that you were one of the children who got polio from the vax. I was in the first group of children to get vaxed for polio in the 50s and am lucky that I was not one.

Yes people are dumb but as a doctor myself whenever patients ask for my advice on the meaning of a 1% death rate I remind that it means that 1 in 100 will die but if you are the one you will 100% dead. OR I advise them to consider what they would do if they saw a bowl of 100 candies with the knowledge that one contains cyanide. Are you going to take the risk of choosing one of those candies?

I think it's fair to say that most doctors and medical services, politicians and broadcasters even, have been 'CAPTURED' as have regulatory bodies in many countries. My friend's carers lost three of their older patients right after the shot, here in UK. They refused to touch the jab, ever.

I lost several customers to the fate of the shots- 4 to be exact. Several more had side effects that they never attributed to the shots. At the moment several of my customers have severe Covid- very ill - but of course, they are " vaccinated". They are planning another lockdown/masking mandate in October (so I hear) and I'm very concerned this will be more heavily enforced like China did and severely affect my work.

It is beyond heartbreaking to see the 2 photos at the top -- the one on the left of a very healthy-looking man --- and the one on the right of a very sick man with a tube in his mouth and needles inserted in veins all through his arms. DAMN DAMN SHOTS!!!!!! I'd like to round up every one of those evil criminals behind this and put them in torture chambers that will show them what they put people through. And I don't care about the danged word MANDATE -- It is ILLEGAL to fire anyone who refuses the shot. It is THEIR body and no job has any right to claim they can't keep the job if the don't get it -- that is ILLEGAL. No wonder laws aren't taught in schools in the US anymore. Mandates are NOT laws, people. Egads, I've had to tell that to people so many times and it suddenly dawns on them.

while not being an MD, but having experience in sequence analysis, i can assure, the injected Spike protein, has like D.r Ardis is saying, a venom-like toxin character. To treat venom, constantly being expressed in ones body, affecting the acetylcholine receptors, which are the No 1 entry to our memories and neuronal functions, is basically equivalent to treatment of a permanent blockage of those receptors. There are protocols to do that, according to some alternative MD's, Dr. Ardis in the first place, it would be binding of nicotine instead of the Spike, to those a7 AchR receptors. EDTA is known to inactivate venoms, digestive enzymes are known to chop these proteins down, BUT the foreign genome administered in every shot, once embedded into the human DNA, even worse if in stem cells).._, will be much more difficult to eliminate. Just my opinion..

Thanks for yet another excellent (but sad) post on this never-ending Covid-19 Scamdemic. Here is the e-mail I sent to Airbus this morning:

Thanks for reading my e-mail.

I am Tom Petrie, from Clifton Park, NY and have a quick question for you.

In light of the fact that Airbus Helicopters REQUIRED their pilots to get the Covid "vaccines" WILL YOU BE COMPENSATING ANY EMPLOYEE OF YOURS FORCED TO GET THESE DANGEROUS SHOTS AND THEN SUFFERING AN APPARENT SERIOUS ADVERSE EVENT (OR DEATH)?

[From a recent news report: Tim McAdams, a 59-year-old pilot and health enthusiast loved his work teaching pilots to fly Airbus Helicopters — until Airbus required him to get the COVID-19 vaccine. Three weeks after he got his second Pfizer shot, Tim had two cerebellar strokes — a rare stroke in the cerebellum that accounts for only 1-4% of total strokes.]

Your answer WILL be published in my forthcoming book on this Covid scam. This sad case should be added to the thousands of others--athletes, celebrities, pilots, etc. that have made

That's very sad, it's a shame what's happening to people who succumbed to the narrative but no one was forced to do anything. They chose their job in exchange for a jab. Enough with the forced narrative, it's no better than the MSM pushing the 'antivaxx' narrative, one extreme doesn't balance out the other, they just create two extremes and both are fake news. Those who complied are culpable in the keeping of this nonsense alive and well. Had they said 'No' and walked off their jobs, this would have ended. DO NOT COMPLY. Trust your instincts. Be autonomous. When you comply, what happens is on you.
